

New national job board site online

A new national job board is dedicated to helping people with disabilities find jobs. The Web site, www.AccessibleEmployment.org, is designed to provide employers with a place to post employment positions and search resumes of qualified, disabled candidates. In addition, the site allows potential job candidates to post their resumes for review by prospective employers who have made a commitment to include people with disabilities in their workforces. The service was started by the New Jersey Business Leadership Network.

